MR. O'CLARENCE'S ESSAYS TO SPLIT A BARREL.—Mr. O'Clarence bought two old barrels for kindlings, Saturday, and Sunday morning, when Mrs. O'Clarence was at church, he went down cellar to cut them up. As it was necessary to smash in the staves, before doing anything else, he laid the barrel on its side, and taking up the axe, gave it a ringing blow. The axe immediately bounded from the barrel and flew over Mr. O'Clarence's shoulder, nearly taking off one ear, and rapping himself severely in the back. Mr. O'Clarence was astonished. He turned the barrel over and looked at it, and then rubbed his back and felt of his ear. It was quite evident that he must use more caution if he would cut open the barrel without cutting open himself. The next blow was delivered with still greater force, and with such success that the staves crumbled beneath it like so much air, and Mr. O'Clarence, who was not quite sure but that the axe would not bound again, and had actually braced himself in resistance to the consequence of such result, failed to recover himself in time, and went down among the staves on his knees, and with such momentum as to nearly disjoin his neck. If Mr. O'Clarence was astonished before, he was nearly petrified now. He got upon his feet and moved away from the barrel, briskly rubbing his neck but saying nothing. Then he seated himself on the cellar stairs, and pulled up his pantaloons legs and looked at his knees, which were seriously skinned. After that he sat on the stairs some ten minutes, and looked at the demolished barrel, and tried to recollect where in twenty-three years married life he had seen anything quite so contrary and unexpected as was that barrel. The clock upstairs striking twelve aroused him. He jumped down, placed a stove in a way to fracture its spine, and struck it a sharp blow. It broke at once; the lower half flew straight up and slapped him in the face, and the other half flew over the swinging shelf, upsetting a quart pitcher of milk and knocking off a glass jar of cherries. The milk ran between the cracks of the shelf, and formed in puddles on the cement floor, and the jar came down with force enough to smash it into a myriad of pieces, and fill the air with cherries and splinters. The horrified wretch dropped the axe and stared at the wreck, and rubbed his head, and just then a little boy, who lives next door, appeared at the window, in a blue suit with bell buttons, and at once shouted: "Ma, ma! Mr. O'Clarence is cutting wood on Sunday." And would have probably added other information, had not a well aimed potato caused him to retire with great vehemence. When Mrs. O'Clarence came, which soon she did, she found her husband spearing behind the pork and charcoal barrels with a broom for a cat. As soon as she could change her dress she went down and helped him, but the animal was not found, very much to the amazement of Mr. O'Clarence. —Danbury News.

THE JAPANESE AT TABLE.—[From the Far East.]—If bread is the staff of life with Europeans so is rice with Asiatics. It is the staple food of the people, and with a little soy or pickle, or some other simple condiment, is often the only food of the lower classes in Japan from month's end to month's end. They do not rejoice in the knives, forks, and spoons of civilization, nor use their fingers like the East Indians, but they use a couple of skewer-like sticks, which they call hashi and we call chopsticks; and uncommonly dexterly they apply them to all the necessary purposes. Foreigners can manage them only after much practice, and some can never get the knack.
It is strikingly curious to see them eat for the first time. The rice is brought up in a beautifully-clean tub which holds enough for the day's consumption. It is as often served cold as hot, and the modus operandi is as follows: We will suppose it is a simple meal of the simplest classes. A small table, about nine to twelve inches square and six to nine inches high, is placed sometimes in the middle of the feeders, sometimes one to each person. On this table are two or three small dishes. Perhaps one has some slices of cold fish; another some pickles, lily root, green ginger, and horse-radish; another little bowl of soy, and so on. A small bowl of rice, and a small basin, about the size of a breakfast-cup, with gozen (rice) in the left hand, and one to each person, it is taken in the left hand, and being held close to the mouth, the contents are thrust from the basin into the mouth most cleverly; ever and anon there is a pause to take a slice of fish, which is rendered more palatable by being dipped in the soy. This, with an occasional peek at the other little dishes, forms the repast. Of course richer people have richer food; but although some times their meals consist of many courses, and all beautifully served, they take only a peek at each, and have a considerable interval between the courses. It is unusual to drink with the meal, but a little warm water suffices at its close, the richer folk taking an occasional cup of sake—wine made from rice—between times.
If the food of the common people is simple in the extreme, the entertainments of the rich are sometimes masterpieces of artistic excellence, both in the preparation of the food and in its display. Sometimes the guests may sit round a scenic arrangement as of a luxuriant island or a beautiful domain in petto, all the dishes being arranged as parts of the scene. It is quite unique, and different from anything seen elsewhere.

WANTED.—A quantity of WHITE OAK and HICKORY POLES 14 feet long.

NOTIONS AND TOYS BEYOND ENUMERATION.

REAL HAIR DEPARTMENT

A WONDERFUL SUCCESS.
THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS' WORTH OF THE BEST FRENCH HAIR, of the most beautiful shades imaginable, in stock, which is manufactured under my supervision by a corps of experienced Hair Workers (call and see the processes of manufacture)—into the most stylish Braids, Switches, Curls, Puffs, Chignons, Frizzies, &c., that taste and skill can devise.
Over one hundred thousand Price Lists printed, and a distribution of which has induced orders from almost every State in the Union, and goods sent invariably elicit satisfactory responses.

CUMBINGS made up promptly into any design, and no substitution of inferior for good hair. No American hair bought or exchanged, consequently no imposition upon customers by supplying hair that generally will not stand (cumbings) rotted by pomatums or burnt by curling irons. My prices for first class work and goods are lower than can be found in the U. S. Factory prices, and material guaranteed, and money refunded immediately, if not satisfactory.
No humbugging indulged in or deception practiced.
For reference, inquire of any citizen of Alexandria, or to the editor of any paper in Northern or Western Virginia.
Price List mailed to any address.

GREEN'S REAL HAIR GOODS MANUFACTORY.

HAIR AT WHOLESALE.

With a large force of skilled Hair Workers, I am now prepared to furnish dealers with all styles of Real and Imitation Hair Goods at the lowest factory prices. Large quantities of the best French Prepared Hair, of all colors, (no dyed hair) as well as Grey Hair of all lengths, which I manufacture into Switches, Braids, Curls, Puffs, Frizzies, &c., and sell at least 35 per cent less than they can be bought in New York. TAKE NOTICE—I do not buy or exchange Domestic Hair, as my customers would undoubtedly be the losers by so doing, as nearly all native hair is injured more or less by injurious pomades, curling irons, crimping, &c., &c., and Switches, Curls, &c., made of such hair will soon reduce in size by breakage in use.
In adding hair to special orders, to which particular attention is given, nothing but the best hair is used, and ladies or merchants always get what they order. Hair Goods mailed, postage paid, to any address in the United States.
